GREETINGS

Our congregation seeks to support you not only at the time of the funeral, but also in preparation for it and as you return to daily life. Whether death has occurred or is still on the horizon, know that you have our deepest sympathies and our attentive care.

ABOUT FUNERAL SERVICES

When should I call the pastor?

The pastor is available to be present when death approaches. Both the experience and the presence of the pastor can assist those in mourning. If not present at the time of death, please call the pastor as soon as possible after someone dies.

What happens at a funeral?

A Christian funeral often involves a visitation, a funeral service, a cemetery committal, and a light meal. Each of these elements are part of a continuous procession leading the bereaved to hear the voice of the Gospel with healing power and clarity. Although a funeral may focus on positive memories and emphasize God's grace and gift of resurrection, we also do not minimize or ignore the pain and loss of death, nor the honest pains of life truly lived.

When and where should the funeral be held?

Please consult with both the pastor and the funeral director before setting your hearts on a particular date or time for the funeral. Previous commitments might limit when either is available.

The funerals of practicing Christians are generally held in the church they regularly attend. For those without an active relationship with the church, a funeral home might be a more suitable location. Either way, the church and its pastors share our hope in the love and mercy of God, and are committed to supporting you.

What pastor will lead the funeral?

Funerals are typically led by Saint Andrew's pastor. Visiting pastors may be invited by our pastor to share a role.

THE CHURCH SERVICE

What happens during the funeral service?

The funeral service is primarily a worship service, during which we celebrate God's gift of life. We reflect on one's earthly life, and the promise of eternal life with God. We pray for all who mourn and commend our beloved to God's care.

How does this service get planned?

You will meet with the pastor to plan the service. While you may come to this meeting with some ideas from your own experience or this booklet, rest assured you don't need to have everything figured out beforehand. It is likely choices will fall into place when meeting with the pastor, who may also have ideas unique to your beloved.

What scriptures will be read?

Depending on the individual and the setting, anywhere from two to four scriptures are read during the funeral service. Scripture will also be read at the cemetery committal. We generally try include scriptures from both Old and New Testaments.

Although certain verses (such as confirmation verses) may be meaningful, when read in their context, they may or may not fit the funeral service. While we wish to honor the written wishes of the deceased, it is also important that the scripture be meaningful to the gathered mourners and that it speak the whole Gospel. Scriptures are selected in consultation with the pastor.

Will the obituary be read during the funeral?

Although customary in some locations, this is optional. Often the facts are well-known to those in attendance. Some experience the obituary as impersonal and prefer to offer a eulogy. Others leave it to the pastor's reflection to touch on the character of the individual. The obituary may also be printed in the service bulletin.

What kind of music should we have?

There are three places in the service when music is often included: the procession, after the reflection, and as the casket is taken out. Additional places may be made in consultation with the pastor.

Funerals in a church typically involve congregational singing. Vocal or instrumental solos can be used to supplement this voice of the community. Although recordings may be appropriate on occasion, they often do not have the same personal touch of live music.

Funerals held at a funeral home typically do not involve hymn singing due to the setting and make-up of attendees. Instead, music is often played on the organ or sung by a soloist. It is also more common to hear recorded music at a funeral home.

Whatever form of music is selected, it should reflect the spirit of Christian confidence, trust, and hope in God. Hymns commonly selected for funerals include, but are not limited to:

- Abide with Me
- Alleluia! Jesus Is Risen!
- Amazing Grace
- Be Thou My Vision
- Blessed Assurance
- Borning Cry
- For All the Saints
- Give Me Jesus
- Have No Fear, Little Flock
- Healer of Our Every Ill
- How Great Thou Art
- How Small Our Span of Life
- Jesus Loves Me!
- Jesus, Still Lead On
- O Christ the Same
- On Eagle's Wings
- Soon and Very Soon
- Thine the Amen
- This Is My Father's World
- Thy Holy Wings
- Children of the Heavenly Father
- Come, We That Love the Lord
- Doxology (Praise God from whom...)
- Guide Me Ever, Great Redeemer
- I Know That My Redeemer Lives!
- I Want Jesus to Walk with Me
- I Want to Walk as a Child of the Light
- Just a Closer Walk with Thee
- Just As I Am, without One Plea
- Let Us Ever Walk with Jesus
- My Faith Looks Up to Thee
- O, Happy Day When We Shall Stand
- O Lord, Now Let Your Servant
- O Morning Star, How Fair and Bright!
- Precious Lord, Take My Hand
- Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me
- Shall We Gather at the River
- Softly and Tenderly Jesus Is Calling
- The Trumpets Sound, the Angels Sing
- When Peace Like a River (It is Well)

Does someone need to offer a eulogy?

A eulogy is optional. You may choose not to offer a eulogy if it would be difficult for you to speak in front of a crowd, if you prefer to leave the reflection to the pastor, or if you would rather share your memories with others in private or during the funeral meal. You do not dishonor your loved one if there is no eulogy. We generally limit eulogies to no more than two family members or friends who can speak for all who are gathered.

A eulogy is intended to share memories that speak to the faith and character of the deceased. Written or outlined reflections are preferred. Eulogies over a few minutes tend to feel awkward for attendees. One or two specific and well-described stories speak best to the character of your loved one and are most universally appreciated by all present. The pastor is willing to help you determine what is appropriate to say. If emotions make it impossible to deliver the eulogy in the moment, you may ask the pastor to read what you wrote.

Who will read the scripture?

This is a good place to include family (especially children or grandchildren) or friends who would like to have a role in the service. Nonetheless, many choose to have the pastor read.

THE COMMITTAL SERVICE

What is the committal?

The committal is a brief graveside prayer service at the cemetery. During this time, we bless the resting places of the dead, hear God's promise to raise the dead and reunite us with our beloved, and send the faithful to follow in the footsteps of Christ and the deceased.

What about a military, EMS, fraternal, or other send-off?

These rituals may or may not be appropriate for the committal depending on the local practice, theology of the organization, and character of the rite. Some rites are better held outside the context of a committal service. Inclusion can be planned only in consultation with the pastor. It is our practice that God has the final word.

What if there will not be a burial?

If there will not be a burial, or it will take place at a later time, elements may be incorporated into the funeral service. Please inquire if you would like the pastor to be present for a private committal at a later time or distant location.

What if the weather is bad?

A tent is usually set up at the cemetery to protect from some types of weather. Alternate options include holding the service at the place of the funeral or traveling to the cemetery with a small group.

What if I'm limited by mobility?

Mourners are welcome to remain at the church during a committal. Arrangements can also be made with the funeral director to have a car brought close to the graveside and the window opened.

ABOUT MEMORIAL SERVICES

How is a memorial service different from a funeral?

While much remains the same as a funeral, a memorial service remembers a deceased person when the body is not present. Sometimes the body is buried at a different time and/or place. When cremation is chosen, the ashes are placed in a sacred place such as our Memorial Courtyard Garden. Information about this option at Saint Andrew's may be found in the brochure, The Memorial Courtyard Garden. Just ask the Pastor for this information.

THE FUNERAL MEAL

What is the purpose?

It provides an opportunity for family, friends, and neighbors to connect, share stories, and focus on the joy of life shared with the deceased.

What is served?

Funeral meals often consist of sandwiches, salads, beverages, and desserts. Arrangements can be made for the food to be prepared and/or served by members of the congregation. Alternatively, the family may choose to work with a caterer.

What is the cost?

A minimum donation of $3 per person is requested.

A donation to the (funeral fund of Saint Andrews) is also appreciated. The pastor can provide contact information for questions or special requests.

Can we still have a meal if the funeral is at the funeral home?

A meal can be served at the church for any funeral led by our pastor.

What if the burial is far away?

If the place of burial is located at a distance, a meal can be held immediately following the funeral service, prior to departure for the committal.
